

Which King?
The life of David Part 4
I Samuel 20

Questions:

1. Think of God's offer to David's son Solomon, to give him whatever he asked for (see 1 Kings 3). What's the first thing that pops into your head that you would consider asking from God? What do you think you would eventually request as your final answer?
2. Think of a time when God offered you the opportunity to sacrifice something for His sake. How did you know it's what He wanted? Was it hard to do? How did it turn out in the long run? Was it worth it?
3. If a friend were to ask you how they could know whether they are truly living for God, or instead for himself/herself, what would you suggest they consider in discerning that? Can you think of any Scriptures that would be helpful?
4. This might be challenging: In 1 Samuel 19 and 20, Jonathan keeps bringing Saul or David out to "the field" to try to resolve things. The word "field" in Hebrew can mean a cultivated field (agricultural), or the home of wild beasts, or a plain (contrasted with mountain), or land (contrasted with sea). Is there any New Testament significance to that recurring theme of "the field"? If God gives you insight into that, please let Willie know because he's super curious.

Which King?
The life of David Part 4
I Samuel 20

Questions:

1. Think of God's offer to David's son Solomon, to give him whatever he asked for (see 1 Kings 3). What's the first thing that pops into your head that you would consider asking from God? What do you think you would eventually request as your final answer?
2. Think of a time when God offered you the opportunity to sacrifice something for His sake. How did you know it's what He wanted? Was it hard to do? How did it turn out in the long run? Was it worth it?
3. If a friend were to ask you how they could know whether they are truly living for God, or instead for himself/herself, what would you suggest they consider in discerning that? Can you think of any Scriptures that would be helpful?
4. This might be challenging: In 1 Samuel 19 and 20, Jonathan keeps bringing Saul or David out to "the field" to try to resolve things. The word "field" in Hebrew can mean a cultivated field (agricultural), or the home of wild beasts, or a plain (contrasted with mountain), or land (contrasted with sea). Is there any New Testament significance to that recurring theme of "the field"? If God gives you insight into that, please let Willie know because he's super curious.